Special Services Held On Ash Wednesday

Special services making the ushering in of Lent were held in Washington C. H. churches today, Ash Wednesday.

Ash Wednesday started 40 days of fasting, abstinence and special penitence in preparation for Easter.

Special services have been planned at the St. Colman Catholic Church throughout the Lenten period. Rosary, sermons and benedictions will be offered each Sunday and Wednesday night while on Friday nights benediction and stations of the Cross will be held. All services are set for 7:30 P. M.

The St. Colman Catholic Church got its observance of Lent off at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday morning with a High Mass. Ashes of the palm used last year on Palm Sunday were blessed and distributed.

Those who were unable to attend the Mass Wednesday morning will have an opportunity to attend services at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. Ashes will again be distributed, a sermon offered and the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament held.

Holy communion services were held Wednesday morning at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in celebration of Ash Wednesday.

The services were well-attended, considering the bad weather. Rev. D. J. MacDonald, pastor of the church, said.

Rev. Harold J. Braden, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, will preach at evening services at St. Andrew's at 7:30 P. M. Rev. MacDonald said.

Roman Catholics and some others over the nation went to their churches to have ashes placed on their heads as a symbol of the day. Special services were held.

One of the top Ash Wednesday events in New York was a scheduled parade of an estimated 10,000 members of the Knights of Columbus up Fifth Avenue to St. Patrick's Cathedral. A special K. of C. Mass will be celebrated. Ash Wednesday coincided with Washington's birthday. Patriotic ceremonies were held in observance of the holiday, and many places of business were closed.

Inspection Set Of Mason Lodge Plans Complete for Father-Son Banquet

The Master Mason degree will be conferred at the annual inspection of Fayette Lodge No. 107 of Free and Accepted Masons at 7:30 P. M., Thursday.

Officers of the Grand Lodge of Ohio will make the inspection, said L. M. Blessing, Master of the F. and A. M. lodge here.

Entertainment committee chairman, Max E. Lawrence, who secured Stahl for the banquet, said that Stahl will provide the commentary for color movies of the Ohio State-California Rose Bowl game.

Lawrence said that these films have just been processed and are much superior to others which have been shown here since the New Year's Day classic.

Tickets for the banquet, limited to 250 people, are available through the officers and stewards of the lodge, and Blessing urged members to get theirs at once.

Three from County At Urbana Meeting

Baldwin Rice and Grove Davis, members of the Fayette Soil Conservation District Board of Supervisors, and Francis Baker, farm planner for Fayette County, attended a luncheon meeting of the soil conservation district supervisors from six counties Tuesday at Urbana.

Following the luncheon, this group of about 40 men heard a very inspiring talk by Rev. James Strong of Rosewood (Champaign County).

He discussed the place of the rural church in conservation. He brought out that the farmer is a partner with God in caring for the soil; that the farmer is a steward of the soil, and as such, he may use it. Rev. Strong said men must conserve the soil for future generations; that he, the farmer, will be held accountable before God for its stewardship.

Rev. Strong pointed out further that the rural church has a vital interest in conservation because of economic and moral reasons.

He stated that conservation of the soil makes possible the fullness of life that was brought to this earth by Christ.

Harvey Loudonback, superintendent of schools in Champaign County, spoke on the conservation program in the rural schools of that county. He said conservation is being injected into the curriculum of every grade in the county's schools.

Kenneth Rinehart, county extension agent of Champaign county, made a few remarks on the national plowing contest to be held in Champaign County September 12 and 13 of this year.

Troubles Elsewhere

Most of the rest of the country, however, was in a less favorable position than Ohio. Government mediation of the nationwide dispute was getting nowhere in the nation's capital.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(AP)—Government mediation of the nationwide telephone dispute ran into stone-wall resistance today. Only quick White House intervention appeared as a possibility to head off the walkout of 100,000 workers Friday.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of the Communications Workers of America, told a Nashville audience last night that the walkout seems inevitable.

Cancellation Director Cyrus S. Ching reported the stalemate in peace efforts to the White House last night.

His plans for bringing the Western Electric Company representatives into the same room here with the CIO-Communications Workers yesterday were rebuffed. The company said it would negotiate only in New York, where it has been meeting for weeks in fruitless bargaining sessions with the union.

The union representatives, who stood by all day yesterday while Ching argued with company officials to sit down with the union in his office, refused to return to New York for talks here.

The hours ticked away toward the deadline of a nationwide telephone strike at 6 A. M., local time, Friday. The last countrywide 'phone strike was in 1947, by the same union, then the National Federation of Telephone Workers, an independent organization.

Human Bones Found

a school teacher and wife of a contractor, declared her conscience had driven her to tell of the slaying of her father.

Another son, Hugh, 18, who lives with his mother, Ruth, 54, later corroborated his sister's account, Witt said.

Witt said he was given to understand that the elder James mistreated his wife and children and that Carlsen shot him to death "for the good of the family."

Witt said he was told that James was slain after a quarrel at a family reunion on Thanksgiving Day in 1947. Members of the family, sworn to secrecy, buried the body, he said.

Aside from the story of the father's death, the James' family history is remarkable.

The farm home is a boarded-over basement of three rooms. The sons have college degrees or are attending college.

Both daughters also are college-trained. The second daughter, Mrs. Lorraine Martin, is a teacher in Chelsea. A son, Ralph, 22, is a student at Michigan State College. His brother, Justice, 24, attends Wayne University in Detroit.

Police Chief Witt said he had known the family for years and that its accomplishments were largely due to the mother's hard work.

As the investigation continued, no charges were filed against any of the family.

Income Tax Explanations

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(P)—Can you use the 1040 short form in filing your 1949 income tax return?

You can, if your income was under $5,000. And it makes no difference where your income came from, or what kind, or whether taxes were withheld from it during the year.

(Actually, most of the under-$5,000 people who had full tax withheld from their income will use form 1040-A, discussed yesterday and in previous stories.)

When you use the short form you do not figure your own tax but find it, already figured for you, in the table on page 4.

If your income was $5,000 or more you cannot use the 1040 short form. You must use the 1040 long form of 4 pages. When used by the under-$5,000 people, who find their tax in the table on page 4, it is called the short form.

When it is used by the $5,000-or-over people—who figure their own tax on page 3—it is called the long form.

Although it's easier for the under-$5,000 people to use the 1040 short form, some of them—those with unusual deductible expenses will save money by using the long form.

That's because anyone using the short form gets without asking—it's already allowed for in the tax table on page 4—a deduction of about 10 per cent for personal expenses like hospital bills, charitable contributions, taxes and so on.

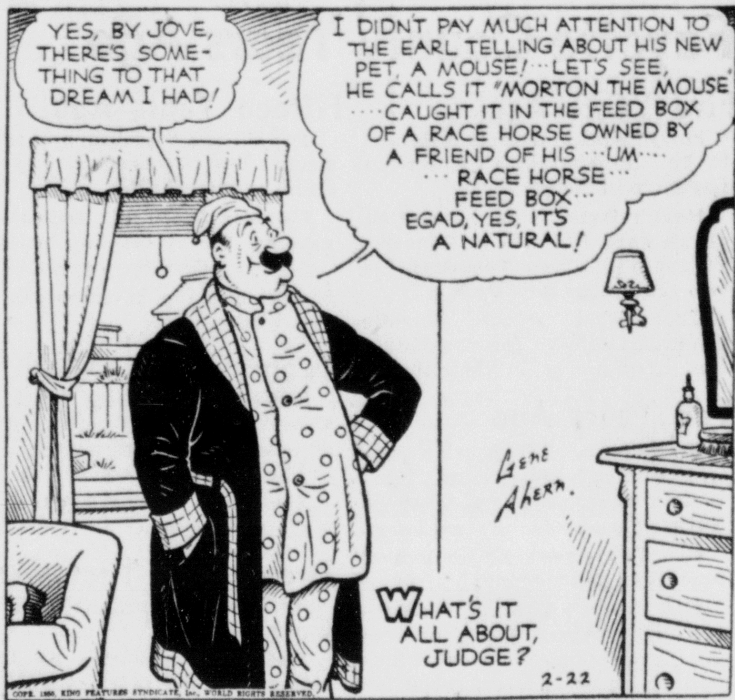

But—suppose a person's deductions were actually more than 10 per cent of his income. He'll lose money in using the short form since there's no place for him to claim more than 10 per cent.

Therefore, the smart thing for him to do is to use the 1040 long form. There he will have to figure his own tax and itemize all the deductions he claims, but he can claim them in full.

Husbands and wives may be puzzled about filing jointly on the 1040 short form. One thing is certain: if one of them had income but the other didn't, they cannot lose by filing jointly on the 1040 short form, provided their total income was under $5,000.

Board and Room

By Gene Ahern

In such a case they'd lose money by not filing jointly, each claims half the income, even though one had none of it. This throws each half into a lower tax bracket.

Example: Jones' income was $4,800, his wife had none. If he files alone, his tax is $544. If his wife files jointly with him the tax on the couple is $514. You can see how that works yourself on page 4 in the columns opposite an income of $4,800.

When a couple's total income is under $5,000, but each had some of that income, in most cases they will save money by filing jointly on the 1040 short form. But this will not be true in 100 per cent of the cases.

So such a couple check the tax table carefully to see whether they will save by filing jointly or separately on the 1040 short form.

Then there is this problem for married couples where both had income, total income was under $5,000, and one of them wants to use the long form in order to itemize his deductions which were more than the 10 per cent allowed with the short form.

In such a case can one use the long form and itemize to get more than 10 per cent while the other files separately on the short form, taking the 10 per cent deduction allowed him in the table?

No. When one uses the long form to itemize, both have to use the long form and both have to itemize.

If husband and wife have a combined income of $5,000 or more, although the individual income of each was under $5,000, they can file separately on the 1040 short form but not jointly. They can file jointly on the long form, that will give them the benefit of splitting their income to reduce their tax.

Remember: in every case where a husband and wife wish to file a joint return, both must sign it.

(Tomorrow: how to fill out the 1040 short form.)

TB X-ray Unit To Be at Fair

Mobile Unit Coming Last Week in July

A mobile X-ray unit will be available to the public when the 1950 Fayette County fair opens the last week in July.

C. M. Casey, field supervisor in the Division of Tuberculosis, state department of health, recently replied favorably to a request by Health Commissioner Gordon E. Savage for a mobile unit for the fair.

In a letter to Dr. Savage and J. Paul Strevey, executive-secretary of the Fayette County Tuberculosis and Health Association, Casey said that the unit coming here in July would be the same unit that conducted an X-ray survey here in July of 1948.

The mobile unit will arrive in Washington C. H. on July 24 and can begin X-raying on Tuesday, July 25, Casey said. The X-ray unit will remain here through Saturday, July 29, working a maximum of six hours a day.

A total of 678 persons were X-rayed during the summer of 1949, when a mobile X-ray unit examined people in front of the Court House and in Jeffersonville.

The eight-ton mobile unit coming here this summer will be a cab-over-engine bus 28 feet long, 12 feet wide and more than 11 feet high.

The unit is being made available through the cooperation of a number of agencies: the state department of health furnishing the unit; the Fayette County Fair Board providing the facilities; the county health board furnishing help and the county tuberculosis and health association sponsoring the survey. The Business and Professional Women's Club handled the administrative work connected with the previous survey.

Strevey announced that an X-ray survey of the high school juniors and seniors in the county would be conducted sometime in April. The general X-ray Survey Company of Columbus will handle the survey, Strevey said.

Washington's Wisdom Worth Recalling

If every American made a practice of reading George Washington's farewell address once a year, carefully, with thorough attention and later meditation, this would be a better nation than it is. In fact, if every American just once in his lifetime read that address in its entirety with attention and meditation, the benefit would be very great. It is so wise, so foresighted, and so human withal. Let us take a paragraph or two to read in honor of the great man's birthday, slightly condensed for space, but with the meaning clear:

"It is substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government. . . .

"Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened.

"Observe good faith and justice towards all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be, that good policy does not equally enjoin it? It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a good people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence. Who can doubt, that in the course of time and things, the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it. Can it be that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature. Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?"

These words might have been written for our situation today. They are still alive and still pertinent.

Proof—It Can Be Done

In an era when the federal government comes up with a proposal to run five billion dollars into the red in its operations, the news that the state of New York, largest in the Union, is cutting its budget by more than 77 and a half millions is of real significance. To a generation which had all but forgotten what a balanced table of revenues and expenditures looks like, this is a welcome sign that it can be done. All that one needs is the will to do it.

Within the past few days, a former Veterans Administrator offered the suggestion that if we were to line up all employees of the federal government, have them count off by four's, and then dismiss every odd number, we should have better work done in our government services. The plain fact is the federal government is scared stiff of any thought of large scale dismissing of its employees. At the present time, there are approximately 2,000,000 civilian employees working for the national government, and in spite of continuous pressures, the number continues at a very constant level.

If the state of New York can cut its expenses without injuring its huge program of capital improvements, the men in Washington D. C. can do the same. All that is lacking is the will. Only the voters can stiffen that will with a few well-chosen "X's" marking the right spot on the ballot.

Many housewives dream of the day when their "Come to dinner" cry will echo with immediate response from the breadwinner in the next room. However hungry, many manly mortals must be tugged before laying down the evening paper.

It's Living that Shortens Life

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK. (AP) —Anybody got a used town for sale—cheap? Burl lives, the big, bearded ballad singer, is in the market for a second-hand small town, in it if it has a mountain or two around it and the price is right.

He'd like it for a purpose — to see if he can build a community where Americans can have some real down-to-earth fun again.

"People don't have real fun anymore — not honest — to — God fun," complained "the way-farin' stranger," as he sat in slippered ease comfortably over-flowing an over-stuffed chair in the Hotel Plaza.

"I'd like to build a place where they could go and have fun, and do the things they want — a creative place."

"It would be an inside-out place rather than an outside-in place. By that I mean I'd want people to get the spirit of having their entertainment come from inside rather than from outside themselves."

Burl, who earns more singing folk songs than Beethoven did writing symphonies, explained he thought people had less fun nowadays because "they are expressed at — instead of expressing themselves.

"And that ain't good for the soul."

"Radios, movies, television, sporting events — they're all good, but they don't allow people to give out with their own talent." So he'd like to create a community where they could come, either to live or spend a vacation, and develop their talents. They'd sing folk songs themselves, learn square dances — "they're ten times more fun than ballroom dancing" — and paint, make pottery, do leather work, weaving or any other type of handicraft.

"The big need today is self-expression just for the fun of it," he said. "The trouble is now if a kid does show a little talent of any kind, his parents right away want to put him in the entertainment business."

Burl said that if he couldn't afford to buy a town he'd start out with a dude ranch, one "without any phoney atmosphere." He hasn't decided what to name his village yet, but it definitely won't be "culture city."

"I hate that word culture," Ives said, making a face through his whiskers. "It started as an honest-to-God word, but it has lost its strength. It is already 'pink tea' and has a curse on it."

Just how he'll find time to develop his project, Burl doesn't know. Last year he gave 131 concerts and 150 benefit performances, made 75 radio and television appearances, sang four weeks of hotel engagements, appeared in one movie and three plays, recorded 20 folk songs, learned to fly an airplane and finished the first draft of his second book, "Capra Corner."

This would keep the average fat man thin. But Burl not only gained weight on the schedule—he found time to indulge in his hobbies, sailing, photography and amateur painting.

"I travel so much that about the only thing I can paint is the view from hotel windows," he said. "I always ask for an outside room."

His other pleasures are good food, good beer, good cigars and good talk.

"All I need to get fun is to have something to do that keeps me excited — and they get coming along. I get a lot of fun out of living."

Right now he's engaged in his annual diet to cut his weight from about 300 pounds down to 240. When friends warn him his present pace will kill him, Burl says:

"Well, nothing shortens life more than living."

Removal of Moles By Surgery Is Best

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MOST people who consult doctors about the type of moles known as pigmented nevi are usually concerned only with the improvement of their appearance.

If this were the only consideration, there would be little question about the best way of dealing with them. Any method which destroys them without leaving a scar would be adequate. However, because of the tendency of such moles to become cancerous, many physicians feel that neither electrolysis, freezing with carbon dioxide snow, nor destroying them by a cautery is satisfactory.

One type of mole is called the macular nevus. This mole is flat. It may be safely removed by using an electric cautery, and this can be done without causing any subsequent scarring.

The popular nevus is a mole that is raised above the skin. It is suggested that in these cases a bit of the mole be cut off for examination under the microscope to make sure that the growth is not becoming cancerous. Then, the entire mole is removed with the electric cautery. In such cases, a scar does develop, but enough of the tissue is removed so that the scar is even with the skin surface.

(Copyright, 1950, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Persons who have moles which seem to be getting larger or darker in color should consult a skin specialist immediately concerning proper treatment.

The Government Spending Spree

By George Sokolsky

Figures by themselves are often misleading. They need to be related to comparable data. Yet, it is astounding that from 1789 to 1933 (144 years), the government of the United States spent $112,720,800,000. Then from 1934 to 1945, the Roosevelt era which included a great war, the government of the United States spent $375,804,100,000. In a word, in 11 years, Franklin D. Roosevelt spent more than three times as much as was spent from George Washington to Herbert Hoover, inclusive.

From 1946 to 1951 (the new budget will run to June 30, 1951), Harry Truman, in five years, will have spent $259,576,200,000. Comparing Roosevelt and Truman, Roosevelt in the peace years of his administration, from 1933 to 1941, spent $72,601,000,000. Truman then has spent in five years three and one half times as much as Roosevelt spent in his peace years, including 1939.

Truman's fault is not that he was caught in a bad situation, not of his making, but that he has not done much to save the situation. For instance, while no one would deprive a veteran of his just due, the veterans themselves ought to oppose wasteful expenditures. For while they are veterans, they are also citizens and taxpayers. As citizens, they do not want their country to go bankrupt as taxpayers, they do not want the tax rates to be one cent higher than is absolutely essential.

When Herbert Hoover's commission made proposals for increased efficiencies in the veterans' administration, some officers of veterans' organizations protested and used their great influence to smear Herbert Hoover. Instead, they should have joined his effort, because then they would be serving their members as veterans, citizens and taxpayers. Instead, they chose to serve public officials who hate to be deprived of a single expenditure. The president has not made this clear to the public.

President Truman is making the same mistake politically that the Republicans did in 1932. At that time, it might be recalled, 1940 and 1941, a period of preparation for war and aid to Great Britain. This question of expenditures must be considered from the standpoint of the survival of our national economy.

This must be said for Mr. Truman: much of his expenditure is a result of a continuing war. Seventy percent of the 1951-1952 budget is to pay for past, present and future wars. When a business man faces fixed charges, from which he cannot retreat, he watches his other expenditures closely to make sure that he can avert bankruptcy. He might even try to do something about his fixed charges.

It is often forgotten by many today, but Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 ran on an economy and beer program. He promised to cut government expenditures and to end prohibition. He started to keep his promise regarding economy but was only too soon involved in New Deal expenditures; he kept his promise concerning the abolition of prohibition.

Mr. Truman faces the growing anger of the American people over wasteful, inefficient and even corruptive expenditures. Farmers are beginning to question the worth of subsidies. The wiser veterans are not a little ashamed at some of the so-called educational expenditures of the veterans' administration. Great questions are being asked about the use of RFC money to finance incompetently managed businesses. Questions are being asked about financing Swiss watches to kill American watch-making about financing Czech, British and Japanese crockery to kill off American-made crockery.

It is beginning to pile up into a mighty protest, into an overall inquiry as to what is happening to our money. Mr. Truman would do well to put his ear to the ground.

HOLLYWOOD, FILMDOM'S CAPITAL, FINDS RIVALS IN ROME, VENICE

In the filming of a new picture the Castel Sant'Angelo, Rome, is used for background. The castle was built in the Second Century by Antonio Pius as a defense against invaders seeking to cross Tiber river.

By SANFORD MARKEY
Written for Central Press and
This Newspaper

HOLLYWOOD'S new "location" lies between the seven hills of Rome and the canals of Venice.

Movie companies, producers and stars are beating a steady path between those two cities in a highly competitive struggle to translate the glories that were Italy into the hard cash of American dollars.

At least a dozen top Hollywood names are now on "location" and movie companies are planning a host of pictures to capitalize on blocked American dollars. The road to Rome first opened after the war when Shoe Shine came to America and scored a financial success.

It cost but an estimated $36,000 to produce, and netted hundreds of thousands of dollars. Hollywood was amazed that so low-cost a production could bring such results. Also, movie-land's magazines were wondering how to capitalize on blocked Italian lire that could not be brought out of Italy.

Hollywood put the loose ends together and reasoned why not make films in Italy, pay for them with the blocked lire, and bring the finished product into the states.

THE STUNNING success of this thought became further evident in a comparison of costs. An Italian extra gets about $3.75 per day as against a Hollywood fee that can range up to $23. Italian carpenters work for $5 a day as against the Hollywood scale that starts at $2.50 per hour. Italy's musicians work for $1 an hour; Hollywood must guarantee a minimum of $33 a day.

Furthermore, Hollywood has history on location in Italy. The glories of Rome, Venice, Florence and other cities are open at any time. The Italian government, realizing movie-making as a fertile field for employment, makes many concessions in the use of historic places.

Visitors to Venice recently could, for example, stand in historic St. Mark's Square and watch Orson Welles making a movie on the balconies once used by the Doges who ruled the city.

IT IS POSSIBLE to shoot scenes in Venice that go back to the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries without the need of building sets. Last November, Venice became the busiest city in Europe for film shooting with at least four major companies at work at the same time.

For Venetians, this was a bonanza since November is the worst month of the year for the city that lives primarily on tourist spending.

Yet, it is not peaches and cream for the American producer. Italian labor, recognizing its low wage scale as against Hollywood, is constantly on the alert.

Recently, producer Mike Frank-ovitch was threatened with a strike by his regular Italian extras.

THE DIRECTOR hastened to explain that in his picture he needed cafe background shots of people in formal clothes, and, he added, members of the nobility appear to be the only ones having tuxedos and formal gowns. Hence, he had hired them.

Language difficulties, too, pose a problem. Italy is becoming Europe's movieland. As a result it is attracting many different nationalities. One set, outside Rome this summer, was forced to post signs in seven languages so that there would be a minimum of confusion.

The avalanche of Hollywood talent flowing into Italy has been reflected in a spurt of Italian pictures. From July 1, 1948, to June 30, 1949, a total of 72 pictures were made, an unusually high number for a continental nation during this postwar period.

Hollywood shooting, too, is high with the current schedule calling for at least 10 full length movies.

Now, Hollywood is contemplating a series of television shorts that will be based on Shakespearean plays with an Italian background!

With production so heavy, one Italian extra commented on a Venetian set, "soon Italy will be the 49th state, located right next to Hollywood."

Food from Sun Within 2 Years, Goal of Science

Research Conducted On Small Scale in Research Work

By RENNIE TAYLOR
PALO ALTO, Calif., Feb. 22—(P)—Within two years Stanford University scientists expect to be able to show hungry peoples around the world how to use sunlight to produce nutritious food cheaply and in great quantities.

They have worked out a comparatively large-scale method of controlling the process of photosynthesis. This is the process by which plants use sunlight to convert water, carbon and a few other simple chemicals into the tissues of which all living things are made.

All the major scientific problems have been licked. The remaining job mainly is to work out the technical and engineering details which will give the greatest yield for the smallest expenditure of materials and energy.

Experiment Small

Since the Stanford pilot plant is small, the yield will be limited. Each tank, 10 feet long and 4 feet wide, should produce about one pound of dry chlorella every three days. But the process is contin-

Problems Remain

Some minor scientific problems remain but given another two years, says Paul M. Cook, chemical engineer in charge of the project, the researchers should have enough data to launch this spectacular undertaking on an industrial basis.

Just now the scientists are starting their first small pilot plant. It is a futuristic-looking collection of barrels and shallow rectangular tanks atop the Stanford chemical engineering lab.

Into each tank the researchers will put something less than 100 gallons of water which has been "spiked" with a few ounces of nitrates and a few pinches of minerals such as magnesium, iron and sulfur compounds.

A few hundred little green one-celled plants, too small to be seen individually, will be dumped into the tanks. Small pumps will stir the water and add carbon dioxide now and then. Sunlight will do the rest.

These little plants are a type of algae or seaweed called chlorella pyrenoidosa. Each contains chlorophyll, the stuff which makes plants green and converts chemicals into cell substances with the aid of light.

Works Like This

The walls of the cells soak up a little of the spiked water. When sunlight strikes them their chlorophyll goes to work. Soon the cell gets so big it splits in half and forms two complete cells. This goes on at a great rate until the chlorella is so thick that the water turns dark green. Then the harvest starts.

Automatic controls drain off some of the chlorella-laden water and add more clear spiked water to the tank. From the drained water the chlorella is separated, then dried. In that state it is a blackish green substance with a 50 per cent protein content.

It is two to three times as rich in protein as many ordinary agricultural plants. The protein contains all the amino acids necessary for human and most animal growth. There is one drawback. It tastes like alfalfa.

But the operators have produced in a few hours the essential food of man and beast. They have done it without soil, without labor and without waiting through a growing season. They have completely short circuited conventional agriculture.

Experiment Small

Since the Stanford pilot plant is small, the yield will be limited. Each tank, 10 feet long and 4 feet wide, should produce about one pound of dry chlorella every three days. But the process is continuous. The chlorella in the tanks keep on growing indefinitely. Only the surplus is harvested and the flow of surplus never stops.

Once the engineering plans are worked out, tanks may be built hundreds of times larger and yields measured in hundreds or thousands of pounds.

As it is, the pilot tanks should be producing enough to start the experimental feeding of chickens with chlorella in a couple of months Cook said. It already is being used in the test feeding of laboratory rats.

Although the initial outlook is that chlorella will be used mainly as a feed for livestock there is no apparent reason why it could not be used directly as human food. It boils down to a question of palatability. You could sprinkle a couple of spoonfuls of it on a serving of meat and get that much additional protein in your meal without any appreciable change in taste, Cook said.

The raw materials or chlorella production are available almost everywhere. Nitrates perhaps are the greatest problem in some places but their essential ingredient, nitrogen, can be obtained even from the air if nowhere else.

Water No Problem

Water is not much of a problem. The same water can be used over and over, with the addition of a little extra now and then.

The sunshine is free. So is chlorella.

Chlorella can be made to produce fat as well as protein. All the scientists have to do is to cut down a little on its nitrates and the chlorella grows up with a fat content of as high as 85 per cent. Thus it could be a source of oils as well as meat.

This versatility of chlorella was discovered several years ago by Dr. H. A. Spoehr and Dr. Harold W. Milner of the Carnegie Institution's Plant Biology Laboratory at Stanford.

The Stanford scientists will give no estimate of large scale production costs but concede that at the outset at least the protein they produce will be more expensive than that produced by conventional farm methods.

However, in small scale experiments they have succeeded in utilizing two per cent of the total solar radiation in the protein making process. This is a substantial gain over the rate of solar utilization in agriculture which at best is three-tenths of one per cent, they say.

With this greater efficiency, they add, it is conceivable that some day the process will yield protein at a lower cost than farmers can produce it.

The main object of the pilot plant is to see how far they can go toward increasing efficiency and reducing costs before any big scale operation is undertaken.

The process does not necessarily need direct sunlight to operate. The yield, Cook said, is almost directly proportional to the intensity of the visible light cast upon the tanks. This means a slowing down of production on cloudy or dark days but as long as there is some light there is a corresponding amount of production.

Tipping Not Good Hotel Association And Union Agree

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(P)—The public got its knuckles rapped at a Senate Finance Committee hearing today for its insistence on tipping waiters, bellhops and other service workers.

Tipping is a bad practice, said the American Hotel Association. And so said the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union (AFL).

The Hotel Association spoke through its first Vice President, Daniel J. O'Brien of Toledo, Ohio. He said tipping is an irritation to many hotel guests and kicks up friction between hotel owners and employees.

But guests insist on tipping, said O'Brien, "so we have something to live with this practice." Charles E. Sands of Cincinnati, Ohio, spokesman for the union, said that organization believes employees "should be paid adequate wages so that they will not be forced to take tips to make a livelihood."

Tips are involved in a house-passed social security bill now before the committee. Among other things, the measure would make an employee's income from tips taxable for social security benefits.

But sections of trees used in making turpentine have been found suitable for paper pulp.

Two Interesting Subjects Were Heard Discussed At Browning Club Meeting

The regular meeting of the Browning Club was called to order by the president, Mrs. Emerson Chapman, who opened with the reading in unison of the club collect.

She then called upon Mrs. Darrell Williams for the secretary's report and a report by the treasurer, Mrs. Robert Auginbaugh.

A few further plans were made for the banquet in April.

Mrs. D. R. Murdock was program chairman for the evening and she opened the program by reading the quotation which is as follows: "The little dissatisfaction which every artist feels at the completion of a work, forms the germ of a new work."—Anerdach.

Mrs. Murdock then presented Mr. Hal Summers who sang two numbers, "Who Knows," and "Mother McCree." Both numbers were very much enjoyed by the appreciative audience. His sister, Mrs. W. B. Tooker, Jr., accompanied him on the piano.

The first paper was given on "Art in Everyday Life" by Mrs. Robert Auginbaugh. "Art is a part of life in every race and country of this world. We have learned much about the way people lived in the past by the works of art that have been preserved through the ages."

"Art today plays a very vital part in our modern civilization. The houses we live in, the clothes and designs in all materials, our cars, trains, planes, ships, and many other items, too numerous to mention, were all created by the thoughts and hands of an artist. As an example, the latest model automobile first takes its shape on paper. Many drawings of the car and its various features for the 'new look' are first drawn and redrawn on paper. These artists are the industrial designers and are constantly designing new merchandise."

"Then there are the artists who create on paper and canvas. There are many artist colonies in this country where the artists find the subject matter they wish to draw or paint."

"Two of the best known colonies on the east coast are found in Gloucester and Rockport, Mass. These two towns are sea food ports. The fishermen, fishing boats, gulls, sea, coast line, with all its shacks and many other items that make up marine scenes, attract the artists. A few miles from the shore are found granite quarries, beautiful trees, small streams, ponds, marshes, sand dunes and sunsets of unusual beauty."

"Since the towns are early American the quaint crooked and narrow streets with the little Cape Cod houses furnish many a subject for a painting. In spring, the flowers, especially hollyhocks, add so much beauty to the houses and grow freely everywhere."

"Perhaps the most painted building in the world is to be found in the harbor of Rockport. This building is a dull red, aged fishing shack known as Motif No. 1. Every artist that visits Rockport sooner or later paints this building."

"Because of all this variety of subjects to paint, artists have found it their ideal spot to live and paint."

The second paper of the evening was given by Mrs. Charles Pensyl. Her topic was "Indian Arts and Crafts" and was most interesting. "The Indian loved color and design. Their costumes proved this for they created clothing in contrasting colors of fur, leather tassels dyed a brilliant red, white leather, and white caribou hair."

"The chief had moccasins of buckskin covered with embroidery of porcupine quills and a necklace of 50 claws of the nails of a grizzly bear. His shirt was beautifully sewed together with the front and back curiously garnished in porcupine quills and paintings of the battles he had fought."

"The bottom of the shirts or dress was bound with ermine skins and tassels of ermine's tails were suspended from the arms and shoulders."

"Basketry is the oldest of all Indian handicrafts. Baskets were first made from strips of rabbit skins, entwining branches and woven reeds for cooking pots."

"Hot stones were dropped into the reed pots and stirred with the food until it boiled. The Apache Indians used hard rods for the foundation of their baskets. They sewed them with yucca roots and fibers which they weave in such a way as to produce a surface almost as smooth as pottery. Yucca thorns serve as needles. Dyes are made from treating plants. They never make two baskets alike."

"The early American Indians wove mats for beds and floors from rush. The mound builders wove cloth from plant fiber, probably cotton."

"The Navajos learned to spin wool and make cloth and blankets. The blankets were woven so closely they shed water. Designs also had their meanings; usually religious ones."

"Another one of their arts was the making of metal jewelry. With baked clay and sandstone, he molds jewelry with the air of a home made chisel. The polishing is done with the materials at hand—sandstone and ashes."

"The Navajos are famous for their silver work. The Zuni Indians take the lead in small pieces of jewelry."

"The Indian mother passes the art of pottery making on to daughters."

Alice Davis Is Honored On Birthday

Miss Alice Davis was pleasantly complimented on Tuesday evening when close friends entertained in honor of her birthday anniversary. The group enjoyed a delicious two course steak dinner at Anderson's Drive Inn early in the evening. A prettily decorated birthday cake provided the centerpiece for the table. Following the enjoyable dinner hour, the guest of honor was presented with lovely gifts for which she made gracious response.

Later the party motored to Greenfield where they saw the showing of "Christopher Columbus" at the Rand Theatre. Those attending the event with the honoree were Mrs. Robert Miller, Mrs. Paul Thornhill, Mrs. George Robinson, Jr. Miss Mary Jane Hyer and Miss Christine Switzer.

Class Officers Are Chosen at First Meeting

Jesus' Followers, was the name chosen for the newly organized class of Grace Methodist Church, made-up of sixth grade pupils, when they met at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Robert Duntun.

The meeting opened with devotionals in charge of Jo Ann Willis, who read the one hundredth Psalm and Janice Strietenberg closed with prayer.

Election of officers resulted in Margaret Alice Campbell being chosen as president; Robert Crouse vice president; Marilyn Heistand secretary; Roger Smith treasurer; and press reporter John McWilliams. A short business session followed under the direction of the newly elected president.

Their patterns are made up of a very few basic motifs, combined in countless variations of form. There are formed into birds, clouds, plants and animals. It is questionable if any Indian artist of this last generation has surpassed the work of Marie Martinez."

Both of these papers on art were most interesting as well as instructive.

Charge Given To New Rotary Members Here

Founders Day
Program Features
Tuesday Meeting

New members taken into the Rotary Club during the past year were charged with their responsibilities to club, community, state and nation at impressive ceremonies held Tuesday noon at the Washington Country Club.

Ray R. Maddox gave the charge to the new Rotarians. Colin C. Campbell, past district governor, spoke on the subject "Rotary Information" while Ralph R. Penn gave a talk on the "Rotarian", official Rotary magazine.

Campbell described the early founding days of the service club, which now embraces many continents in the world.

He said Paul Harris, a young Chicago lawyer, discussed the formation of the club with a small group of friends who wanted to know more about men engaged in other lines of business.

The result of this meeting was the completed organization of the club on February 23, 1905, he said.

Campbell said he heard Harris talk in Denver. The founder of Rotary was nearing the end of a long period of service to his country. He requested that no flowers be sent when he died, but he did ask that a foundation be set up for the interchange of foreign students.

Many Get Help

Some $2,425,000 has since gone into the exchange scholarship foundation, which has taken its name from Paul Harris. During its first year 36 foreign students received the benefit of income from the foundation. During 1949, 55 students got the benefit from the foundation and during this year some 70 persons are expected to get help from the foundation.

New Rotarians to receive the charge at the meeting included Edmond Woodmansee, Walter Patton, Joseph Peters, Condon Campbell, Victor Smith, Marilyn Riley and Allan White.

The importance of Rotary was stressed to the new members on a special Paul Harris Founders Day program. The program was planned by William Himmelsbach, vice president and program chairman.

Following the charge to the new members, Ray Maddox presented each of the members with plaques, which list the objects of Rotary.

World Institute

Paul Pennington, president of the Rotary Club here, gave the response to the program. He announced that the club here will sponsor two WHS students, Dick Hodson and Clyde McCray, at the World Institute, to be held at the Hotel Netherlands Plaza in Cincinnati March 3 and 4.

Arch Newbrey introduced the new junior Rotarian for the next two weeks, Jack Trimmer, a student at WHS. Bill Arnold the outgoing junior Rotarian, thanked the club for being chosen to attend the meetings.

Jack Howells of New York City spoke briefly to the Rotary Club about the Community Concert Association's drive for new members in this city.

Acknowledgement was made of birthday of William Cliff, Allan White and Frank Jackson.

Increase in Military Budget To Take Up Job Slack, Is Tipped

By REP. CLARENCE BROWN

Nearly 5000 Democratic bigwigs paid $100 a plate to attend the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner at the National Armory in Washington last Thursday night, and to hear President Truman castigate his Republican opposition. On February 6, 11,000 Republicans attended a $1 box supper and Lincoln Day rally here in Washington. Strangely the Republicans paid a federal tax on each ticket to their party affair, but Democratic spokesmen insist no tax is due on their $100-a-plate dinner, as actually the dinner was given free to each person contributing $100.00 to the party's political war chest.

President Truman is having a bit of a feud with White House news correspondents over a private interview he gave to a New York reporter a few days ago, in which he "explained" his famous "red herring" statement in connection with the Alger Hiss case. While it has been the custom for presidents not to give private press interviews, Mr. Truman insists he will give or withhold interviews to individual reporters as he sees fit.

A move is on foot in Congress to request, and, if necessary, to compel, the president to turn over personnel and other departmental records in connection with loyalty investigations. Congressman Velde of Illinois, a former FBI agent, is said to be heading up the movement to permit Congressional committees to obtain full information from the executive branch of the government in connection with all loyalty investigations.

Rumor has it that America is soon to be given another war scare. With various European countries now receiving American economic aid failing to cooperate by adopting tariff and currency reforms, Director Hoffman of the European Recovery Program is expected to make his appeal for further foreign aid funds on the basis of military necessity. It is also said the Truman administration feels additional expenditures for military purposes will help meet the growing unemployment and a sagging economy which is expected to develop on the home front the latter part of this year.

In his Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner speech, President Truman took another dig at the Republican 80th Congress. He once more called it a "do-nothing" Congress and denounced the Republican 1948 tax reduction bill which took 7,000,000 American completely off the Federal tax rolls and cut individual income taxes by about five billion dollars. This reminds us that since the second session of the Democratic 81st Congress began on January 3, only one unimportant legislative measure has been enacted and sent to the White House. Also that in neither session of the Democratic 81st Congress has there been any attempt to repeal the Republican 1948 tax reduction bill, or to restore the tax cuts contained therein.

A delegation of Japanese officials, who have been touring the United States to study the American way of life visited Washington last week and were received by high government officials with considerable pomp and ceremony. If we recall correctly there were quite a number of Japanese officials studying our way of life some time prior to December 7, 1941--Pearl Harbor Day.

An official board of the national CIO last week ordered the United Public Workers union expelled on the basis that the union followed the Communist line in its activities. The United Public Workers is made up of 30,000 employees of the federal government--but, of course, the huge majority of federal workers do not belong to it.

As this column is being prepared the coal situation still looks dark. John L. Lewis has twice ordered the miners back to the pits, but most of them remain out. The coal shortage has become extremely critical. If no settlement can be reached, or results obtained by the presidential action, Congress stands ready to enact any laws requested by the president to meet the situation.

For two consecutive weeks the Republicans in the House have received cheering news from midterm Congressional elections. Week before last Wm. B. Widnall, a Republican, was elected, by a better than two to one majority over his Democratic opponent, to fill a vacancy in the New Jersey Congressional delegation. Last week Wm. H. Bates, a young officer in the navy, who was therefore unable to make any campaign, was elected on the Republican ticket in Massachusetts, to succeed his late father, killed in a tragic airplane accident, by a majority of nearly three to one. In both districts the Republican majorities were much greater than for many years.

Another member of Congress died last week--Schuyler Otis Bland of Newport News, Virginia, chairman of the powerful House merchant marine committee and dean of the Virginia delegation in Congress. Representative Bland was a member of the house for 32 years. He was known as the father of America's present modern merchant marine fleet. He died of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Big Tanks at Sewage Plant Start Operating

EFFLUENT SPEWS OUT from big circulating arms onto tons of rocks in a filtering tank at the Washington C. H. sewage disposal plant. Another tank, of identical size, is shown in the background. It is also in operation. The two tanks, together with a pumper station, a final settling tank and piping form the new additions to the plant. Officials say the additions, costing about $90,000, will cut down on the amount of objectionable matter which has been discharged into Paint Creek. Ellis Bolton, superintendent of the sewage plant, described the operations with the new additions as "very satisfactory" to date. The additions were put into use just recently. (Record-Herald Photo)

Ex-Marine Fighter Pilot Finds New Life As Deep Sea Diver

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — One might think things have been rather rough for Ex-Marine Fighter Pilot Sam Logan ever since that fantastic June day seven years ago when a Jap Zero deliberately cut off one of his feet as he was parachuting down.

At that time, the Marines rated him as one of the real heroes of World War II. But the glory didn't amount to much when the big show was over.

Logan went broke trying to run a charter air service in Los Angeles after the war.

Today, he figures he has solved forevermore the dilemma of maimed war veterans whose lives to them--seem hopeless. Simply, his philosophy is:

"Don't let anyone tell you you can't do something just because you're maimed. Keep on practicing. Quit coddling yourself, and you'll be better than the average guy."

Logan, a native of Paola, Kan., is a well-built, good looking man of 29 who has taken up deep sea diving and is making a go of it. He works for his two brothers who operate a diving and salvage business here. Every few days he dons a heavy brass helmet and plummets to the depths of the St. John River and the Atlantic Ocean, wearing a plastic waterproof leg he made himself. He's believed to be the only one-legged diver anywhere.

Logan today displays the same doggedness that carried him through one of the most remarkable episodes of the war. Flying a Vought Corsair, Lt. Logan was dog-fighting at 20,000 feet, when enemy bullets shredded his planes tail assembly. Logan

There is a notation on the plaques which states that "all solicitors for donations of money, merchandise or advertising are referred to the local Chamber of Commerce."

McNair Church Supper Postponed Indefinitely

The Fellowship Supper which was to have been held at McNair Presbyterian Church on Lewis Street Friday night has been postponed indefinitely.

The committee announcement explained that the affair could not be held on schedule because repairs being made in the church basement have not yet been completed.

No future date was set for the supper because, it was explained, it is not known when the basement work will be finished.

There was nothing to indicate, however, that the supper would not be held after the repairs are made.

Kicked himself out of the craft and began to float down. A Zero raced at him. He felt a stab of pain. The Zero's propeller had cut his right foot off.

He was picked up and spent five months in a hospital.

He came to Florida and took up diving. He married a girl he met on a blind date--Mrs. Jasquelyn Tate of Greensboro, N. C., whose first husband, Marine Lt. Donald Tate, was killed in the same area where the Jap got Logan.

The top eight bred gilts averaged $192.50 while the top gilt brought $230. The top fall pig brought $180.

Members of the sales committee included Donald M. Ruhl of Mt. Gilead, John L. Simpson of London and Ulric C. Roush of Hillsboro.

Officials of the sale stated that buyers from all over Ohio were attracted to the sale.

Madison and Jeffersonville Face Crucial Game Thursday

A big crowd of enthusiastic basketball fans is expected to pour into the WHS gym Thursday night as the Madison Mills and Jeffersonville teams meet for their crucial clash.

Implement League Scores Are Good

They opened up with the heavy artillery in the Implement League again Tuesday night.

Bob Wise turned in a three-game series of 623 and M. Crooks had one of 610. The high single game was rolled by D. Belles when he smacked the pins for a juicy 257 in his last effort. A team mate, F. Lynch, got 220 in the same game. Their totals were 590 and 567.

The pace setting Warner Servicemen did not roll their match with the Farm Bureau. It was postponed until Friday night.

But the second place, Sons Grille kept the heat on them by winning two out of three from the Carpenter Hardwaremen.

The Wackman lost two to the Mt. Sterling crew, but they were still out of immediate danger from the Hardwaremen.

Dutch Denton's outfit held its place by winning two from the VFW.

Newborn Infant Brought to Police

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 22.—(P)—A woman trailed by three children aged four to seven walked into a police station yesterday, deposited a towel-wrapped infant on the sergeant's desk and said: "I've just had a baby."

Mrs. Mary Alice Durant, 28, gave birth unassisted to the child in her apartment, then walked two blocks to the station. From there, an ambulance took her to General Hospital. Attendants said both are doing well, although the baby at first was in critical condition.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE
"THE WHOLE THING seems rather new now, Detective Painter insisted. "It all ties together. The careful way the robbery was planned. Dustin's resistance, which show he had no foreknowledge of it. The man who answered your phone and immediately pretended to be you when he recognized Mrs. Dustin's voice."

Mr. X, mused Shayne. "Who is he and how does he fit in the picture?"

"It's as plain as the lump on your jaw," scoffed Painter. "He was ner accomplice. The guy who actually snatched the bracelet. He was coming to you to arrange a fix. Maybe she'd decided to double-cross him. As soon as he heard her voice on the telephone, he knew what was up and arranged to meet ner outside somewhere."

Shayne said again, "Maybe. He rubbed the uninjured side of his jaw, wandered across the living room to look out the window at the layout two floors below. At his left was the white strip of beach and the lazy rolling whitecaps of the Atlantic Ocean, shimmering and phosphorescent beneath the tropical moon. Like a long finger projecting seaward lay the wooden bathing pier for the convenience of hotel guests. Directly beneath the window a concrete walk led along the back of the hotel from the street to the pier. All the lights, normally turned out this late at night, had been turned on again, and Shayne could see two men, presumably from the police force, strolling about aimlessly as though searching for clues and didn't know where to begin looking.

The inner door of the suite opened as Shayne turned back from the window. The resident physician at the Sunlux announced with professional solemnity, "You may come in now. When you question the patient, try not to excite him with news of his wife's disappearance," after closing the door.

"How much have you told him?" Painter asked.

"Nothing except that I feared the sedative had been too strong for him and that I would cut the prescription in the future." He opened the door and stood aside for the three men to enter the bedroom.

Mark Justir, was propped up in bed on two pillows. His normally ruddy face was sallow and had the drawn look of violent nausea. His injured hand was in a plaster cast and lay stiffly extended on the coverlet. He wet his lips nervously when he recognized Painter and Shayne, and burst out:

"What's all this rumormongering? Where's Celia? Has something happened to her?"

"What makes you think anything like that, Mr. Dustin?" Painter asked.

"You're concealing something from me. That doctor's been giving me a lot of double-talk. If Celia's all right, where is she?"

"We thought you might be able to tell us that," Painter's voice was silky.

"So something has happened! What, in the name of God, Duster?"

tin panted. "What time is it? How long have I been passed out? What did that sawbones put in that pill he gave me?"

"It's almost two o'clock in the morning, Mr. Dustin," Painter told him. "What time did you take the sleeping tablet?"

"A little after midnight. As soon as the doctor left, Celia fixed it for me."

"And you took only one tablet, Mr. Dustin?"

"Of course I took only one. He said to take one... and then another in half an hour if that didn't put me to sleep. You've got to tell me..."

"We want you to tell us, Painter interrupted. "How do you explain the fact that four tablets are missing?"

"Four? But I only took the one. Do you mean Celia took the others? She didn't. She isn't."

"So far as we know your wife is perfectly all right. Did she say anything about going out later?"

"Of course not. She said she'd stay right here to dissolve another tablet for me if I needed it."

"Ah. Dissolve it, eh?" Painter pounced on the word happily. "Did she dissolve the first tablet for you?"

"Of course. I can't take the stuff in tablet form. Look here," the westerner went on, turning a strained face to Shayne, "won't you tell me what this is all about? Where is Celia?"

"We don't know, frankly. It appears that she may have dissolved four tablets for you instead of one... to make sure you didn't wake up while she was gone."

"Come? Where?" Dustin appeared weak and dazed.

"We had hoped you could tell us," Painter cut in. "Did she say anything to give you an inkling of such a plan? Did you hear her telephone anyone?"

"You're crazy. She wouldn't dope me like that and then slip out to meet someone secretly. We... we're in love!" His strong features were now twisted in anger.

"None of us are intimating that your wife is keeping a rendezvous," said Shayne quietly. "We believe she did give you an overdose of sleeping tablets and then went out to meet a man, but we think she had some plan or idea of tracing the bracelet. Did she say anything about that? Any hint that she was holding any information back from you?"

"No," Dustin said slowly. "Not a thing. I don't... it isn't like Celia to keep anything from me."

"Not even under these conditions?" Shayne asked swiftly, gesturing toward Dustin's bandaged hand and head. "She knew you were in no shape to take any action, and she wouldn't want to worry you. Don't you suppose she thought it best to leave you here safely asleep while she went out on her own?"

"I see. I... don't know. She might do that. She was always trying to mother me... keep me out of trouble. But what clue did she have? There couldn't have been anything..." He paused and made a helpless gesture with his left hand.

"Shayne has advanced one position. By Brett Halliday. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

"There are many women married to wealthy husbands who yearn for money on their own. I don't understand me, you may have been very lenient with ner, even extravagant, I have no doubt that Mrs. Dustin lived in luxury, but did she have ner own bank account? Did she have economic freedom?"

"I never refused ner money," Dustin said angrily. "She had only to ask me when she wanted anything."

"That's just the point. She had to ask you, and believe me, Mr. Dustin, we run into situations identical with this quite often. Wives who have to ask for every dollar they ever have. Wives who..."

"Hey," Dustin broke in angrily. "What are you trying to say?"

"Just this. You brought your wife a ruby bracelet for one hundred and eighty thousand dollars. She knew it was insured," Painter continued profoundly, "for the full amount. Do you realize now a woman might feel wearing a fortune in jewelry and yet without a dollar she can call her own?"

"I think," said Dustin thickly, "I begin to see what you're driving at. If it's what I think, I don't like it. If I were able to get off this bed, I'd..." His left hand doubled into a white-knuckled fist.

"Don't get upset, Mr. Dustin," Painter took a backward step. "I'm forced to speak plainly. Remember, the bracelet was stolen the very first time it was worn. The job had every appearance of being carefully planned. Yet you and your wife were the only ones who knew its value and that she planned to wear it tonight."

"The jeweler knew it... Voorland. And Shayne knew it." Dustin said, turning his head on the pillow to look at Shayne. "Your pipsqueak of a Dick Tracy here pointed that out earlier this evening. He was accusing you of the job. Now he's got around to accusing Celia. Why not me?" He turned back to Painter.

"Because the theft wouldn't benefit you," Painter said indignantly. "Had you forgotten that your wife deliberately drugged you and slipped out to keep an appointment with a man whom she thought was Mike Shayne... after telephoning him she wanted to see him about the bracelet?"

"Wait a minute," Shayne cautioned. "We don't know what Mrs. Dustin said over the phone to Mr. X. We don't know but what she wanted to see me about something else entirely."

Variety Farm Show
In addition to the choice corn that will be included in the show, some of the best smaller grains, potatoes and eggs also will be exhibited.

Businessmen of the community have stood by the show staunchly as they have always done. Hundreds of dollars in cash and merchandise prizes have been offered the winners in the respective classes.

As the past year was a good season for the various products to be exhibited in the corn show, extra choice entries may be expected in all classes.

Judging will start Friday morning since Thursday will be taken for placing exhibits. The exhibits should be in readiness for public inspection by Thursday evening. Highlighting the Corn and Hobby Show will be the annual banquet of city men and farmers Friday at 6:30 P. M. at Memorial Hall, with the farmers hosts to the city men this year. ## Kidner Funeral Service Tuesday

Final services for the late Grover C. Kidner were largely attended at the Gerstner Funeral Home Tuesday at 2 P. M.

There was much sincere evidence of the esteem in which this respected man was held.

Rev. Harold J. Braden, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, read from the scriptures, offered prayers and spoke comforting words in a dignified sermon.

Richard Rankin sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Abide With Me." Mrs. Marian Gage was at the piano.

The many beautiful flowers were cared for by the acting pallbearers, all nephews, Clarence Osborne, Virgil, John and William Noble, Clyde Mann and Don Packer.

Honorary pallbearers were Judge H. M. Rankin, Willard Story, Ed Fie, Will Hay, Eber Coll and Forest F. Tipton.

On the family lot midst the peaceful confines of Washington Cemetery burial was made with many sorrowing friends in attendance.

Lustron Is at End

reached immediately for a statement.

Federal Judge Mell G. Underwood will hear the RFC request for a receiver and an injunction to prevent disposal of any of the property at 10 A. M. Monday. The RFC will ask the court to require that Lustron officials surrender the property to a receiver.

Strandlund himself was named in a suit seeking a judgement for $15,485.875. The RFC petition said that amount still is due on the first loan of $15,500,000 made to Lustron, Oct. 31, 1947. This amount is included in the $36,466,273.01 total sought from the corporation.

The request for a receiver did not include Strandlund. The suit charged Strandlund's assets "are entirely insufficient to pay off and discharge his debts and liabilities."

Plant To Keep Going

A Lustron spokesman said dealers were rushing to fulfill orders for the prefabricated homes in anticipation of a plant shutdown soon.

"Twelve home units were shipped from the plant Monday and 11 more were shipped Tuesday," he said. "Dealers apparently want to fill as many of their standing orders as they can," he added.

He said the plant will continue production until it is ordered to cease operations.

OSU Glee Club To Appear Here Friday

The industriousness of the WHS students is making it possible for the Ohio State University Men's Glee Club to come here Friday morning.

The Glee Club will be presented on an assembly program, set for 8:50 A. M. Friday in the WHS auditorium.

Last October, the WHS students went on a two-week selling spree of magazine subscriptions. The profits that came from the subscription sales went into a fund, out of which the expense of bringing the Glee Club here will be paid.

The Glee Club has a long history at OSU, growing from a quartet to an organization of fifty-five members and becoming a major music activity of the university.

Highlights of its successful career was the first presentation in America of "Kubla Kahn," by English composer Granville Bantock and a performance of "Italian Street Song," directed by Victor Herbert.

Most of the members of the Glee Club are from the Colleges of Agriculture, Commerce and Engineering and have been with the Glee Club for the greater part of their time at OSU.

Approximately 870 students are expected to attend the Glee Club's assembly performance, according to WHS Principal Arthur E. Wohlers. The big WHS auditorium has a seating capacity of about 1,100.

Ohio Coal Shortage

The street lights were turned off when low quality coal could not supply enough heat for the steam needed to meet the 6-8 P. M. peak load.

Cleveland city council approved purchase of 140,000 tons of coal in April, if it is available. Lee C. Howley, acting mayor, said it was good business to buy coal now for delivery after the expected end of the strike, to make sure the order will be filled.

Crown said if coal shipments to Cleveland are interrupted, the city would have no streetlights at all in 10 days, where electric power is involved.

Howley said Monday a dimout or brownout of streetlights has been considered, but there is no intention as yet of ordering one, since fuel saving would not be enough to compensate for the greater traffic and crime hazards.

Mayor Thomas A. Burke is due back in Cleveland today and will meet with representatives of coal retailers to discuss rationing to householders, institutions and industries.

John Carroll University has laid in a log supply to supplement its coal pile, expected to be depleted at the end of the week.

In Washington, Sen. Taft told of being informed that "organized gangs" in Ohio keep miners from going back to work.

His informants were referred to the justice department.

Indications are, Taft said he was told, the "gangs" are composed of members of the United Mine Workers Union.

"It seems to me a clear case of contempt of court by the union," Taft said.

The miners have been ordered by federal court to return to work.

Prosecution for contempt of court, Taft said, seems to be the only step open to the government.
